London Fashion Week - Beautiful Soul S/S '10

Just want to quickly share with you some photos of the Beautiful Soul exhibit
Beautiful Soul is an eco luxury womenswear label that's only barely a year old and is the creation of LCF graduate Nicola Woods. They showed as part of Esthetica at LFW this season.

In this collection I love the oriental prints and how they've taken influence from the Japanese kimono structure and given it a modern, very wearable look. In fact I think some pieces are actually constructed from vintage kimonos and even saris.

ABOUT ME

I pin my groundsheet to the top of my tent when I go camping.
I plant avocados in apartment lifts.
I hang pieces of bread outside my neighbours' window to scare them.
When the wind blows, I race the leaves and usually win (by cheating).
I terrorise the streets of London (I wish).

Please feel free to email me about anything and everything no matter how trivial:

You know, kindness and friendliness really goes a long way. The reason I remember so much of the eco-friendly/ethical clothing labels is because their representatives at the exhibits were so nice and easy to approach. They happily spoke to me and dispensed lots of useful information about what they did.

Unlike the uppity people who looked like, 'what are YOU doing here' as I picked up their press release/lookbook/flyer/etc and hardly tried to explain or demonstrate any of their products because they obviously thought I wasn't worth their time. Well, I also remember these people and have chucked away whatever material
